FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

The Naval Air Basic Training Command

BY REAR ADM. J. P. WHITNEY, USN
Chief, Naval Air Basic Training

STAND anywhere near Pensacola, Fla., look skyward, and chances are, you'll see many SNJ "Texan" trainers humming overhead. In one may be a youngster sprouting wings for his first solo flight;

Rear Adm. Whitney

in another a "50 hour veteran" streaks proficiently through a series of chandelles, loops, immelmans and precision spins; and southward, in tight formation, just above the blue waters of the Gulf of Mexico, heads a squadron of SNJ's to rendezvous with an aircraft carrier to make their first carrier landings.

They are all part of the Naval Air Basic Training Command with headquarters in Pensacola, often called the "Annapolis of the Air," and aptly so, for here Mr. Civilian is moulded, trained, and developed in the first stages of becoming a Naval Officer and Naval Aviator.

In many respects the Basic Training Command is similar to a manufacturing process—an assembly line—or as we refer to it here, a "pipe line." The raw material—student pilots—come from four sources. Foremost are those coming from civilian life meeting the requirements of 18-27 years of age, at least 2 years college, and passing rigid mental and physical examinations. Second are those accepted from the fleet—enlisted men who meet the physical requirements and successfully pass a comparable 2 year college level examination. These two groups make up the Naval Aviation Cadets, or as we term them "NavCads." The remainder of student pilots are officers, men from the Naval Academy, NROTC, and foreign students trained under the Mutual Defense Assistance Pact. Percentage-wise, 70% are NavCads of whom 80% come from civilian life and 20% from the fleet and 30% officers.

Upon reporting to Pensacola the prospective Naval Aviator is fed into the pipeline. Throughout his training, each student receives the same instruction in connection with actual flying. In ground training, however, officer students omit obvious subjects in which they are already well grounded such as Naval Orientation, Military Drill, and Navigation. Flight instruction is identical for all students, consisting of about 200 hours of military flight time including eight qualifying

Officer Promotion Inquiry Is Delayed

The House Armed Services Committee inquiry into the need for modification of temporary promotion policies for officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps now faces a protracted delay which probably will make impossible the preparation and passage of legislation to replace a "standby" promotion measure which will die on 1 July.

The Armed Services Subcommittee, headed by Representative Leslie C. Arends (R-Ill.), which has been looking into the complex promotion legislation, "temporarily" suspended its hearings early this month. It was expected then that hearings would be resumed in early May, but the latest indications are that

PROMOTE POWS

The Defense Department on 23 April announced a policy which will permit liberal promotion for U. S. Servicemen being returned after internment by the Communists in Korea.

Hundreds of promotions will be given to those who have been held for extended periods in Red prison camps.

The action, certain to boost the morale of the freed men, was announced by Assistant Secretary of Defense John A. Hannah and will affect personnel of all the Services.

In some cases, it is believed that former prisoners may receive two promotions within a short period of time.

Billion Dollar Manpower Cut Foreseen In New Budget Soon to Reach Capitol

The revised fiscal '54 Defense Department budget, now under final review at the Pentagon and Bureau of the Budget, will call for a slash of at least $1,000,000,000 in military manpower costs from the amount recommended by the Truman Administration.

There is a good chance the economy-minded Congressional Appropriations Committees will demand further drastic cuts in defense manpower.

The military strength which former Defense Secretary Robert A. Lovett said was a minimum requirement probably will be reduced by up to a quarter-million men—possibly more.

Mr. Lovett's budget for the current fiscal year asked funds for 3.7 million uniformed personnel, which Congress approved. On his last day in office, 19 Jan., Mr. Lovett released a farewell report

Defense Sec'y Asks Dependent Care Data

A noted economist who recently endorsed the proposition that medical and dental care for military dependents "be provided to the extent possible" was named this week by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson as chairman of a new five-member Citizens Advisory Commission on Medical Care of Dependents of Military Personnel. The first meeting will be held 27 April.

He is Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president emeritus of the Brookings Institution of Washington, D. C., the renowned economic research organization.

Dr. Moulton served as a member of the Strauss Incentive Pay Commission, which included in its comprehensive report the unanimous statement that dependent care must be assured in order to retain military personnel in service.

Specifically, the Strauss Commission, in one of six General Recommendations pertaining to changes in terms of service, recommended to Mr. Wilson "that medical and dental care for dependents of military members be provided to the extent possible."

In addition to Dr. Moulton, the other members of the Commission are Thomas L. Parkinson, president of the Equitable Life Insurance Company of America; Dr. Lewis Webster Jones, president of Rutgers University, N. J.; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, noted student and writer on social problems, Washington, D. C.; and Dr. George W. Bachman, senior staff member in charge of health studies of the Brookings Institution.

Secretary Wilson asked the Commission "to make a comprehensive study of policies for the provision of medical and dental care for dependents of military personnel and to recommend any change deemed appropriate for establishing a long-range uniform program for the administration of medical and dental care for dependents."

Although no time limit was set for completion of the study, Secretary Wilson asked that the Commission make its report "at the earliest practicable date."

Secretary Wilson's office said that the Commission will concern itself in particular "with studies of the type and extent of care to be provided; categories of military personnel whose dependents should receive medical care; determination of types of dependents who should be provided with medical care; and the extent of establishment of facilities for the medical and dental care of dependents."

The Pentagon announcement, made on 21 April, was tipped off earlier in the month by Dr. Melvin A. Casberg, Special Assistant to the Defense Secretary for Health Matters, who told a group of medical officers during a visit to Korea that such a Commission would be named.

Dr. Casberg noted particularly that the Commission would not include either

Lull in Fighting As PW Exchange Begins

Fighting proceeded at a brisk pace throughout the major part of the week, but slowed down considerably about the time the exchange of ailing prisoners began.

Allied fighter-bombers deliberately avoided raids in western North Korea for fear of hitting convoys carrying prisoners to Kaesong. However, reports from liaison pilots persisted that the Chinese were shipping supplies to the front along the route used to transport prisoners, thereby assuring for themselves immunity from UN air attacks.

During the first of the week, enemy ground attacks were concentrated chiefly on the eight hills guarding the approaches to Seoul. The main onslaught was directed at Porkchop Hill and Arsenal Hill, the other assaults being seemingly diversionary in character.

The Reds sent attacks against Porkchop on two successive nights. The first push against the ridge was maneuvered by 1000 enemy troops who withdrew after suffering heavy losses. On the next day, Saturday, the Reds again stormed the hill. The foe smashed into trenches of U. S. Seventh Division troops before being turned back in hand-to-hand fighting. After daybreak, Allied artillery caught 100 Reds in the open near Porkchop and killed or wounded all of them. Later in the day, Allied planes dumped 40 tons of flaming jellied gasoline and bombs on the Communists who were regrouping their own lines north of Porkchop.

On the day before the prisoner exchange began, 750 Chinese Communists were hurled back northwest of Kumhwa on the central front by U. S. Third and Seventh Division troops. Elsewhere along the 155-mile front, the fighting was sharp.

The next day, the mutter of guns along the front ceased. Only in the air did the war proceed as usual, and that activity was curtailed considerably. Resorting to radar, allied fighter-bombers sent 133 sorties against enemy front-line positions, chiefly at Porkchop and Vegas Outpost.

While ground action lagged, planes from the carriers Oriskany and Princeton, which ordinarily operate against port cities, flew far inland and dropped bombs and rained bullets on the Sniper Ridge sector in central Korea. The carrier craft also plastered enemy positions facing the Heartbreak Ridge sector on the eastern front.

Three or more planes, presumably Communist craft, flew over Inchon, and the city was blacked out for an hour before dawn. There were no immediate reports that bombs were dropped.

Fighter-bombers kept out of the western sector all together, and activity in the other sectors was somewhat limited. Sabre jets had a few encounters with enemy MIG's, shooting down 6, probably destroying 1, and damaging 3. Capt. Manuel Fernandez, Jr., shot down his 11th MIG, maneuvering it into a crash without firing a shot.

The Communists handed over to Allied authorities at Panmunjom, on 23 April, 14 Americans, 5 Australians, 6 Columbians and 25 South Koreans, bringing the total Americans freed to 79, promising, however, to release 40 more Americans the following day. American sick and wounded prisoners exchanged on 23 April were: Pfc. Fred C. Steinke, 2d Division; Cpl. Jimmie E. Lacey, 1st Marine Division; Corporalman Thomas H. Waddill, 1st Marine Division; Pfc. Samuel J. Armstrong, 1st Marine Division; Pfc. Joseph P. Britt, Jr., 1st Marine Division; Pfc. Richard L. Owen, 1st Marine Division; Pfc. George F. Hart, 1st Marine Division; Pfc. Paul A. 95 Service Juniors In USNA Class of '53

The second largest class in the history of the United States Naval Academy will be graduated on 5 June. It numbers 926, only 120 smaller than the 1946 class which was the largest in the 108-year history of the Academy.

Among the first class midshipmen who are scheduled to be graduated are 95 sons of officers of the Armed Forces. Eighteen are the sons of Navy and Marine Corps flag and general officers, 27 are the sons of Navy and Coast Guard captains, and 13 are the sons of Marine Corps, Army and Air Force colonels.

In addition, two are the sons of Philippine and Puerto Rican colonels, and one is the son of a Royal Navy captain.

FREE BASEBALL DUCATS

Lt. Col. Ray E. Bennett, First Army Special Services Officer, has announced that the three New York major league baseball teams have established policies to admit servicemen in uniform free of charge to 1953 home games.

New York Giant and Brooklyn Dodger home games are open to all military personnel. Their uniform is their pass.

The New York Yankees have allocated 750 free passes per game for men in uniform to the First Army Special Services Office. Special Services will distribute the passes to USO clubs in the Metropolitan area and to Post Special Services Offices in the First Army.

Missing O'Coat Mystery Solved—They Were Worn

Representative R. Walter Riehlman (R-NY) and his Committee on Government Operations had a hey day of publicity this week when they posed a great mystery on the public.

Mr. Riehlman, with the help of the Committee's staff of investigators, discovered that $45,000,000 worth of heavy overcoats, with attached leg-warmers, had been purchased by quartermaster corps in 1945, that they were no good, and that they had disappeared.

A flow of publicity followed—all tending to make the Army Quartermaster Corps look like an organization of blunders. Photographs were taken of members of the Committee staff struggling to get into the bulky service coats. But it now turns out that a large percentage of the overcoats were used in service and that only a few remain in storage. Many other of the charges were also ill-based.

Here are the facts:
a. Procurement by the Army Quartermaster Corps of 1,262,000 of a new type overcoat was initiated in June of 1946. It was planned at that time to make initial issue of the new overcoat during the 1947-48 winter season. This plan, which was based on the supply position at that time of the old type wool overcoat, was suspended due to large and unexpected returns of the old type coat from posts, camps, and stations resulting from demobilization.

b. The new type overcoat with removable lining and attached leg protectors was originally intended to be worn both for field and garrison use and was sized to fit over other items of field and combat uniforms. Subsequent developments on field and combat clothing, however, eliminated the overcoat as a component of this uniform. This resulted in the new overcoats being used after that time only for garrison and semi-dress wear. In using the existing stocks effectively for this purpose it became necessary to make certain modifications of the garment to provide for better fit and appearance and to alter some quantities of large and extra-large sizes to smaller sizes. In addition, the leggings were removed. The total number of coats thus modified was 751,527 at a cost of $1.30 per coat. The material in the leggings was utilized by the Philadelphia Quartermaster Depot in 1952 for the manufacture of parka hoods, thus saving 108,300 yards of material.

c. Issues to troops began in 1950. During that year approximately 16,500 unmodified coats were issued to troops in Alaska; 349,000 to troops in Japan and Korea. It served to cover the requirement of 140,000 at stations in the Continental United States, for issue to troops departing for Japan and Korea, as well as for issue in lieu of the old type wool overcoat when sizes of the latter were not available. In addition, a large number were issued for field testing projects. As of 19 February 1953, 508,797 of the unmodified garments had been issued and only 1,676 remained in depot stocks. Issues of the modified coats as of the same date amounted to 663,914 with 87,613 remaining in stock.

d. The new overcoat is regarded as a desirable item and has proved acceptable to troops, although some further changes were made in the new type overcoat as a result of the decision to use it only for garrison and semi-dress wear. There is very little essential difference between the modified version of the 1946 garment and coats procured under the present specifications.

Destroyer Kyes Hit

The Navy disclosed late this week that the Destroyer USS James E. Kyes (DD-787) was hit by enemy shell fire off Wonsan on 19 April (Korean time), and nine men were injured. Commanding Officer of the vessel is Comdr. Robert A. Thatcher.

The Kyes was delivering fire support inside Wonsan harbor when shells from an enemy shore battery hit her main deck.

All of those injured were members of the ammunition handling party. The three most seriously injured were transferred to the Manchester for hospitalization. The others were treated on board the Kyes and returned to duty.

Army Promotions To Temp. Major

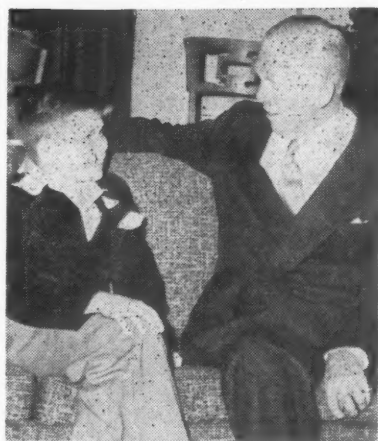

The following is the latest list of 257 Army temporary promotions from captain to major. They are announced in Special Orders No. 74, 17 April, the effective date of rank.

An asterisk before an officer's name indicates that he is a Regular. All others are USAR.

Announced too late for publication this week were approximately 340 promotions to captain and an additional increment of about 260 to major.

The cut-off date of rank for the list of new majors published herewith is 15 Oct. 1945.

Final Decision Foot Soldier's USMC Gen. Tells Army Lts.

The final decision in any battle is determined by the foot soldier, Maj. Gen. Merritt Edson, USMC-Ret., told 129 graduates of the Ft. Benning, Ga., officer candidate class on 17 April.

The graduation speaker pointed out that the combat decision lies in that field because a man with a weapon opposes an individual with the same equipment and the soldier who knows best how to use his weapon wins.

"As long as man lives on the earth and we have wars, wars must be decided upon and this decision is made upon the worth and value of the fighting ability of the Infantry," General Edson asserted.

Gen. Kendall in Japan

Lt. Gen. Paul W. Kendall, formerly the Army's senior corps commander in Korea, has assumed duties as deputy commander of Army Forces, Far East, in Tokyo.

Rockefeller Report Readied For Release

As THE JOURNAL went to press, release was expected momentarily of the Rockefeller Committee report on the organization of the Department of Defense.

The Committee has completed its work. On Thursday, 23 April, Mr. Nelson Rockefeller and Deputy Secretary of Defense briefed Congressional leaders on the proposals at the White House.

The Committee, created by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson with approval of President Eisenhower last month, has heard testimony by top defense officials, past and present.

This week, the recommendations made to the Rockefeller group by one of the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff became public knowledge.

During his testimony before the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee investigating the ammunition situation, General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, was asked about his appearance before the Rockefeller Committee.

At the persistent request of the Senators, General Collins reported that he had made three recommendations.

1. General Collins said to the Rockefeller Committee that in his opinion the Chairman of the JCS should have the duty, clearly defined in law, if necessary, to report to the Secretary of Defense on differences among the Chiefs, or to report any dissatisfaction he may have with a compromise agreement worked out by the Chiefs. General Collins indicated that the present responsibility of the Chairman to make such recommendations to the Secretary is too nebulous. Some persons interpret the fact that the Chairman has no vote (actually the JCS does not take action by vote) to mean that he is to be as neutral as possible and is not to press his own point of view. General Collins feels that the Chairman should have the duty to report all sides of any particular question on which there is disagreement and to indicate his own recommendation to the Defense Secretary if he feels the Chiefs have not acted satisfactorily.

2. General Collins said that the Military Intelligence organizations of the Services should be combined and placed under the JCS. Each Service should retain smaller intelligence units for combat requirements, but global intelligence operations should be integrated.

3. The Secretary of Defense should have a Military Executive for administrative matters with a small staff, under the Deputy Secretary, which would channel matters not required for consideration by the JCS to other Defense Department offices. General Collins recommended to Mr. Rockefeller and his associates.

During recent months, the point has been made repeatedly at the Pentagon and elsewhere that the JCS is burdened with studies which should be made by other persons.

It has been estimated that as much as 50 per cent of the papers sent to the JCS for study and comment could be handled either entirely or in part by other offices.

Although General Collins did not mention this during his testimony before the Senate Subcommittee this week, he is known to feel also that the Vice Chief of Staff should be given broad responsibility in an individual Service.

In event of a war, it is widely recognized that the Chiefs of Staff would be taken up almost exclusively with activities on the JCS in advising the Defense Secretary, the National Security Council and the President and that consequently direction of a given service would fall primarily on the shoulders of the Vice Chief of Staff under the Secretary.

Marine Troops Weather Spring's Sixth Atom Test

Some 2,200 Marine troops crouched in 6-foot dugout trenches 4,000 yards from ground zero this week as the sixth and most powerful nuclear device in the current Spring test series was detonated.

The blinding flash from the explosion lit up Las Vegas, 75 miles south, like bright daylight. It may have been the largest A-bomb ever exploded in this country.

Hundreds of Joshua trees across the desert were ignited by the blast.

"The desert looked like it was sprouting Roman candles," said a Marine officer. "The Joshua trees suddenly were in flames from top to bottom. And the entire desert seemed to erupt. The dust and dirt were so terrific we couldn't see more than 50 yards. By the time we climbed out of our trenches, the sight was terrifyingly beautiful. About that time, one of the Joshua trees about 170 yards away was ignited. I realized what would have happened to me if I hadn't been in a trench."

After the explosion, the Marines scampered out of the trenches and charged toward ground zero. Six Marines and six soldiers, all volunteers, rode out the blast in trenches well in advance of the main body of troops. However, the exact location of the advanced trenches wasn't disclosed. Volunteers have been stationed as close as 2,500 yards from ground zero.

Helicopters took off after the explosion, carrying Marines toward the spot where the device was detonated. Ninety-five planes, including a dozen B-50 bombers, were aloft over the test area during the detonation.

Twenty-seven R4Q transports from MAG-35 at Cherry Point, N. C., carried Camp Lejeune troops to the Desert Rock operation. They made the trip in three groups, led by Col. B. Z. Redfield, CO of MAG-35; Maj. B. H. Barber, and Maj. W. H. Costello. East Coast troops participating in the atomic-test were mostly from the 1st Battalion, 8th Marines, Camp Lejeune, but included 45 men and five officers from Cherry Point and the auxiliary landing field at Edenton. They made up the Second Marine Provisional Exercise Battalion, headed by Col. Payton Harris. Prior to the operation the provisional group received a 10-day indoctrination course at Camp Lejeune.

Parade for Gen. Brooks

Lt. Gen. Edward H. Brooks, Second Army CG, whose nomination to be a lieutenant general on the retired list was confirmed by the Senate this week, will be given a farewell review and parade at 5:30 p.m., 30 April, at Ft. Meade, Md.

General Brooks will retire on that date after 35 years' service and five years in the permanent grade of major general at the age of 60.

His retirement will mark the end of a distinguished military career, highlighted by his WWII command of the 2d Armored Division and the VI Corps in Europe.

Before his assignment to head the Second Army on 4 June 1951, General Brooks was Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, for the Department of the Army.

General Brooks was married 29 Nov. 1918 to the former Beatrice Leavitt of Concord, N. H. They have one daughter, Mrs. R. P. Campbell, Jr., who resides in Arlington, Va. Their only son, Maj. Edward H. Brooks, Jr., was killed in action near St. Trond, Belgium, on 22 Sept. 1945 while serving with the 366th Bombardment Squadron of the Army Air Force. He was a West Point graduate in the class of 1943.

General Brooks, who was graduated from Norwich University in Vermont, will leave immediately after his retirement for the family home near Concord.

WAR COLLEGE CG

From 1948 to 1950 General Moore was Secretary of the General Staff, Department of the Army, Washington, D. C. His latest assignment was as CG of the 10th Infantry Division at Ft. Riley, Kans.

Gen. Shambora Honored

Maj. Gen. William E. Shambora, MC, Chief Surgeon of Army forces in the Far East, was honored recently by the alumni of Georgetown University who presented him the 1953 John Carrol Distinguished Service Award.

General Shambora was one of eight alumni at Georgetown to whom the award was presented. Unable to attend himself because of his service abroad, General Shambora was represented by Col. Floyd L. Wergeland, MC, who recently was appointed to attend the 1953-54 term at the National War College.

The award was presented by John J. Tunmore, president of the Georgetown University Alumni Association, who referred to General Shambora as forcefully presenting the school's traditional part in national defense and the welfare of mankind.

General Shambora received both his B.S. degree and M.D. from Georgetown. Following graduation, he was commissioned first lieutenant in the Medical Section, Officers Reserve Corps. His resignation to equal rank in the Medical Corps, Regular Army, took place in 1926.

Parents of Army Lieutenant Accept DSC For Korea Action

An Army lieutenant who lost his life during his first day of action in Korea recently was awarded posthumously the Nation's second highest military medal, the Distinguished Service Cross.

In a brief ceremony in the office of Maj. Gen. E. K. Wright, CG of the Military District of Washington, retired Col. and Mrs. Earl T. McCullough accepted the citation for their son, Lt. Richard R. McCullough, who died while leading a counter-attack last summer.

"No one except those who were on the scene could really know the extent of Lieutenant McCullough's bravery and sacrifice," General Wright said in describing the 24-year-old West Point graduate's feat.

Lieutenant McCullough was killed during a battle near Chorwon when one of his men lost his helmet and carbine. Lieutenant McCullough gave the man his own gun and helmet, and continued to lead the attack, tossing back enemy hand grenades before they exploded.

"Constantly vulnerable to heavy mortar and artillery fire, he moved about the perimeter, encouraging the men, distributing ammunition and coordinating the holding action," the citation read.

Among those who attended the ceremony were Maj. Gen. Robert N. Young, former commander of the 2d Division, to which Lieutenant McCullough was attached as a member of the 23d Infantry regiment. General Young is Assistant Chief of Staff, GI.

Field Test Atom Gun

The Army's giant 280mm. artillery gun, designed to fire atomic as well as conventional shells, was put through a series of rigorous tests last week at Ft. Bragg, N. C., in what is reported to be the first field training exercise the Army has attempted with the huge artillery piece.

The 868th Field Artillery Battalion, under the command of Lt. Col. Richard J. Bestor, provided the first group of enlisted men ever to set up the mammoth gun in field position and fire it. For the record, the first enlisted man ever to fire the gun was Pvt. Walter E. Hudson.

The huge weapon, which will fire an atomic shell in the current nuclear tests in Nevada, has a range of approximately 20 miles.

Article Sees Inf. in Control

The greatest weakness in NATO's defense strategy is the inability of present Western forces in Europe to repel a massive Russian armor attack, which Moscow is quite capable of launching, according to an article by Garrett Underhill and Ronald Schiller in the 5 May issue of Look magazine. The authors assert this is the result of infantry generals who have gained control of our ground-force establishments and "traded in our modern army for a pre-war model."

The article claims that the West has three lines of defense in Europe—aircraft, field artillery and entrenched infantry—all of which, it says, are inadequate to resist a sudden push by Russia's 40,000 tanks. Tank generals are hoping for the best from President Eisenhower, who used to be a strong armor man himself, the article concluded.

At about the same time, the White House disclosed that the President will discontinue the practice of signing orders for Naval officers. He has transferred this authority to the Secretary of the Navy, who will sign all such orders in the future "For the President."

General Bare to Quantico

Brig. Gen. Robert O. Bare, Assistant Commander of the 1st Marine Division in Korea, has been ordered to report for new duty at the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va., THE JOURNAL learned this week.

Brig. Gen. Bare

His relief, as announced by Headquarters last February, is Brig. Gen. Joseph C. Burger, former Assistant Commander of the 3d Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Although no specific assignment at Quantico has been disclosed for General Bare, it is expected that he will become Director of the Marine Corps Development Center. Brig. Gen. Homer L. Litzberg, former Director, reported early this month to Camp Pendleton as relief for General Burger.

Col. Thompson to OQMG

Col. Fulton A. Thompson, Commanding Officer of the New York Quartermaster Procurement Agency, New York, has been assigned to duty in the Procurement Division, Office of the Quartermaster General, Washington, D. C. He will report 25 May.

No Presidential Yacht

President Eisenhower has announced that he is giving up the Presidential yacht Williamsburg.

The vessel, which was characterized by the White House as "a symbol of needless luxury," will be turned over to the Navy on 31 May. During the interim, it will be used to provide Potomac River cruises for wounded servicemen hospitalized in the Washington area.

The Navy said it has not completed plans for the formal disposition of the vessel. It is expected, however, that the ship will be placed in mothballs and the crew transferred to other duties.

Only recently the Navy completed a $60,000 overhaul of the vessel, but Navy spokesmen said much of this work would have had to be done regardless.

Navy Convention Set

The USS Kidd and the USS Black Associations have announced jointly through their Convention Chairmen, Anthony Valenga and Joseph Traska, that the two famous World War II destroyer associations will hold their 5th Annual Joint Reunion at the Hotel Governor Clinton in New York City, N. Y., 14-16 Aug.

All former members of the two destroyer units interested in attending the reunion are requested to communicate with Harold Monning, Reunion Headquarters, 310 East 8th Street, Kewanee, Ill.

Marine Generals Appointed

Two Marine general officers were nominated this week by President Eisenhower for permanent appointment in their present ranks.

Maj. Gen. Vernon E. Megee, Commanding General of the First Marine Air Wing in Korea, was nominated for permanent two-star rank, and Brig. Gen. Albert D. Cooley, Commanding General of the Third Marine Air Wing, MCAS, Miami, was nominated for permanent one-star rank.

Colonel Towle To Be

Retired On 30 April

Col. Katherine Amelia Towle, USMC, will become the first Regular woman line officer ever to be retired from the United States military service when she steps down next week as Director of the Women Marines.

One of the first six women to be commissioned in the Marine Corps, Colonel Towle was appointed a captain direct from civilian life early in World War II. Before the end of her second year in uniform she had earned gold major's leaves. The title of Assistant Director followed the next year, and in December 1945 she was advanced to her present rank and named Director of the Women's Reserve.

Encountered Hazards

Although it may sound like an easy road to success, Colonel Towle recalls that the military highway was not without its hazards. Chief among these were her lack of military training, and her efforts to get the male members of the Corps to accept the women Marines as equals.

The Marine Corps was the last of the military services to take women into its ranks and some members worried that the ladies would reflect on the Corps' reputation as a rugged fighting outfit. Katherine Towle made certain that such was not the case.

A popular story at Marine Headquarters tells how she overheard a male lieutenant in the early days addressing a lady corporal as "Miss." She reportedly told him in a pleasant but firm voice, "When you address a Marine, you address him, or her, according to rank. There are no Misses in the Marine Corps." The story passed rapidly through scuttlebutt channels and from that day forward, the attitude of the male members of the Corps began to change.

Colonel Towle has watched this attitude shift from outright antagonism, to wavering doubt, and finally, approval. When she retires next week, she will take with her the knowledge that the Women Marines are now fully accepted.

Learned the Hard Way

Her lack of formal military training—the other big obstacle which she overcame—was probably never apparent to the two thousand distaff Marines whose activities she directed.

From her earliest days in the Corps, Colonel Towle carefully observed and absorbed every military custom and tradition which she encountered. This ability to tackle each new experience as a problem in military indoctrination provided her with a type of training which proved just as useful in the end as formal training.

The Women Marines saw only the finished product—a lovely, dignified woman who inspired them with her leadership.

At 55 (the statutory retirement age for women), Colonel Towle will be retired with the lifetime rank and pay of colonel. She will be honored on 30 April with a Sunset Parade at the Marine Barracks in Washington, and then she will doff her green and scarlet uniform to become Dean of Women at the University of California.

USAFR Rated Officers

Fail To Fill Quotas

There was new evidence this week of the increasing difficulty the Air Force is experiencing in obtaining adequate numbers of volunteers for flying duty.

It was revealed yesterday, 24 April, by Maj. Gen. Howard M. Turner, First Air Force CG at Mitchell AFB, N. Y., that since the first of the year only 1660 rated Reserve officers have volunteered for active service.

This, said General Turner, is roughly one third of the requirement.

He disclosed that assignments to combat duty as pilots and aircraft observers in Korea or the Far East Air Forces will no longer be given to Reserve rated officers who volunteer for active service until they have completed a minimum of six months active duty after return from civilian life.

General Turner related that the Air Force is faced with a "critical shortage" of 644 aircraft observers and 2,163 pilots needed to fill vacancies by 1 July.

He said there is no limit to the number of rated lieutenants and captains who can be accepted each month and added that "applications from majors and colonels holding pilot or observer ratings will receive the utmost consideration."

Honor Lackland WAF Lt. Col.

Lt. Col. Della J. Angst, executive officer for WAF training at Lackland AFB, Tex., has been selected by Theta Sigma Phi, national journalism fraternity, to receive a 1953 Headliner Award for distinguished service.

The award will be made 9 May at the fraternity's annual dinner at the Menger Hotel, San Antonio.

Presently assigned at the headquarters of the 3720th Basic Military Training Group, Lackland, Colonel Angst is charged with the reception and indoctrination training of all newly enlisted women in the Air Force. At Lackland since 1951, she was until a recent organizational consolidation, commanding officer of the 3700th WAF Training Group.

Gen. Nelson S. Talbott Memorial trophy.

SELECT PERM. CAPTS.

The Air Force has selected 297 permanent first lieutenants for promotion to permanent captain during fiscal year '54 as they complete the required seven years promotion list service.

Two officers were passed over for a second time; one was passed over the first time.

The names will be made public when they are sent to the Senate by President Eisenhower. This was expected momentarily as THE JOURNAL went to press.

Col. Peaslee Deputy C.O.

Col. Budd J. Peaslee, former Deputy for Intelligence at Clark AFB, Philippine Islands, has been appointed Deputy Wing Commander at Luke AFB, Ariz.

Colonel Peaslee, graduated from aviation cadet training in 1927, he was with the Eighth Air Force in Europe during WW II.

Crash Expert Moved

Lt. Col. John Paul Stapp, leading research expert on the effect of aircraft crashes on the human body, has been appointed Chief of the Space Biology Laboratory at Holloman Air Development Center, Alamogordo, N. Mex.

Colonel Stapp assumed his new post this week. He formerly was chief of the special biophysics projects unit at the Wright Air Development Center's Aero Medical Laboratory.

Colonel Stapp recently was presented the John Jeffries Award by the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences "for outstanding contributions to the advancement of aeronautics through medical research."

This award was conferred for a series of experiments Colonel Stapp directed for the Aero Medical Laboratory at the Air Force Test Center, Edwards, Calif., on human tolerances to abrupt decelerations. The outcome of these experiments gave the aero medical and aeronautical sciences heretofore unobtainable data on the degree of crash deceleration the human body is capable of surviving.

In his new job, Colonel Stapp will direct such research projects as air crew ejection escape from all types of aircraft, human wind blast tolerances up to 800 mph, biological effects of cosmic radiation at high altitudes and effect of high altitude research rocket flights on mammals.

Aeromedical Evac. Flights

Activation of three forward aeromedical evacuation flights on 20 April is announced by Maj. Gen. Robert W. Douglass, jr., USAF, Eighteenth Air Force CG. The new units, designated the Fourth, Fifth and Sixth Forward Aeromedical Evacuation Flights, will receive a three-month course of training from the First Aeromedical Group at Donaldson AFB, S. C.

The flights, formed to evacuate casualties from forward areas, will utilize all types of troop-carrier aircraft—cargo and liaison planes and helicopters. Each unit is to have approximately four officers and 25 enlisted men, including a flight surgeon and a number of aeromedical technicians.

Capt. Alfred E. Leiser, commanding officer of the First Aeromedical Group, will direct the training.

Double Ace Heads Bomb Sqdn.

Lt. Col. George A. Doersch, a WWII double ace, is the next CO of the 66th Bomb Squadron at Lake Charles AFB, La.

The colonel completed the observer training course at Mather AFB, Calif., in August, 1952, and has been awaiting assignment to a B-47 unit. He has a senior pilot rating in addition to his observer rating.

Central APD First Winner of Talbott Memorial Award

The Air Materiel Command's Central Air Procurement District at Detroit became the first winner of the Nelson S. Talbott Memorial Award in ceremonies witnessed by Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott and other high-ranking officials 15 April at Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio.

The trophy was donated last year by the Secretary in memory of his brigadier general brother who headed AMC's procurement districts until his retirement, which came shortly before his death last summer.

The brief ceremonies were also attended by Assistant Air Force Secretary John R. Lewis, General Nathan F. Twining, USAF vice chief of staff; Mrs. Nelson S. Talbott, the general's widow, and more than a score of top AMC officials.

In taking the trophy, Central APD beat out five other AMC procurement districts vying for honors in efficiency and economy under the Command's new depot and district rating program.

Brig. Gen. Russell Keillor, Central's commanding officer, received the award from Lt. Gen. E. W. Rawlings, AMC commanding general, who also presented companion trophies to the leading AMC Air Materiel Area and depot.

For the second straight time, the Mobile (Ala.) AMA captured the Merrill Meigs award by ranking first in efficiency and production over AMC's seven other big area depots throughout the country.

In the smaller depot class, Mallory Air Force Depot, Memphis, Tenn., moved up from the third place spot it held in December to win the Reed-King award. Mallory led seven other AMC depots.

The two trophies, which were awarded for the first time at an AMC commanders' conference last December, were received by Brig. Gen. A. W. Martenstein, commanding general of the Mobile AMA, and Col. W. P. Sloan, Mallory commander.

The current awards covered the first three months of 1953. The three trophies will be placed in competition every three months under AMC's rating plan which sets up performance standards for field organizations. These are balanced against actual day-by-day output and costs and the results are issued in monthly box-scores which show how the depots and districts stack up against each other in their drive for more Air Force per dollar.

The Talbott award honors the late Dayton (O.) industrialist who died last July, only days after he retired from the Air Force, ending a 45-year career as a reserve officer. General Talbott had seen active duty in both World Wars and the Korean conflict.

By coincidence, General Talbott headed the Detroit APD—first winner of the coveted trophy honoring him—briefly in 1945.

Activate Refueling Sqdn.

Approximately 300 officers and men will be assigned to the recently re-activated 44th Refueling Sq. at Lake Charles AFB, La.

The new unit will be equipped with Boeing KC-97 Stratofreighter tankers capable of refueling B-47 Stratojet bombers.

Commanding officer of the new organization will be Maj. W. W. Brooks.

The 44th Bombardment Wg., presently equipped with B-29 Superfortresses, will be converted to B-47s beginning in May. The first KC-97 tanker airplane is scheduled for arrival early in the summer.

AF Puts Stress On Flying For Senior ROTC Spots

The Air Force, stepping up its campaign for more flyers, has announced that first priority for enrollment in advanced AFROTC classes will be limited to students planning to take flight training after graduation.

Also, a number of students enrolled in critical technical fields such as engineering, mathematics and physical sciences will be selected for advanced courses. However, the number of students with no technical background, or who do not desire to fly, admitted to advanced courses will be severely restricted, the Air Force said.

Formerly, all eligible students were accepted upon satisfactory completion of basic courses, but this policy has been altered with the AF's increased need for flyers and junior officers with specialist backgrounds.

Students with prior military service and those now enrolled in the advanced classes will not be affected by the new policy.

Recently, the active duty obligation for those in the flying program was cut from three years plus the necessary 15 months' flying training to a flat three years.

Lt. Gen. Cabell O.K.'d For Deputy CIA Post

Lt. Gen. Charles P. Cabell, USAF, was confirmed this week by the Senate to be Deputy Director of the Central Intelligence Agency. He formerly was Director of the Joint Staff in the Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

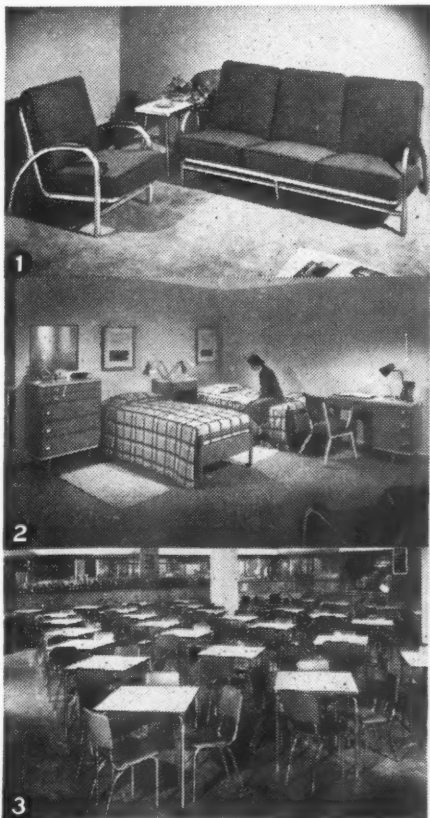

General Cabell was graduated from the Military Academy in 1925. During the early years of WW II, he was assigned to the Eighth AF in the European Theatre. Three months later he was assigned as Director of Operations and Intelligence for the Allied Air Forces in the Mediterranean Theatre. He attended the Yalta conference.

In May, 1945, General Cabell was assigned to AF Hdqs., where he became chief of the Strategy and Policy Division in the Office of the Assistant Chief of Air Staff for Plans. He attended the Potsdam Conference, and in December, 1945, was assigned with the Military Staff Committee of the United Nations.

In the summer of 1947, General Cabell was assigned to AF Hdqs. as Assistant Chief of Air Staff for Plans, and the following two months served as Acting Deputy to the Director of the Joint Staff. In the office of the Director of Intelligence, Air Intelligence Requirements Division in the fall of 1947, he became chief of the He was appointed Director of Intelligence of the AF in May 1948.

"Until all others are ready with us, to substitute the council table for the battlefield, we must parallel and support our efforts toward world stability with a unified purpose to guard ourselves well and to maintain an effective strength that compels respect for our peaceful intent."—DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER.

Leadership in Career Services. There is an ominous and fearful ring to the inspired reports that Congressional leaders are importuning President Eisenhower to designate now the successors to all the current members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and to have them serve as a "stand-by" high command. Backers of the plan want this "stand-by" group to review the budget and reassess the strategic plans at once, even before the current JCS members pass out of office.

The effect of such a procedure in the public mind would be a rebuke to the present military leaders, an indication of lack of confidence, and a punishment for the performance of their duties under the old administration.

The move was adroitly timed, for the current tours of all the JCS members, except Admiral Fichteler's, expire in a few months, and new ones must be named. Thus, whenever successors are appointed the public, in light of the published reports, will construe it as a repudiation of the present leadership.

This placing of a political tag on life time career officials because they served a previous administration is most damaging to the morale, prestige, and efficiency of the entire Service. We do not believe President Eisenhower will stand for it. Already one member of his Cabinet has spoken out strongly against such action. Secretary of State Dulles last Saturday before the American Society of Newspaper Editors defended the career men and women of the State Department's Foreign Service. "There is a tendency in some quarters," he said, "to feel that confidence cannot be placed in these career officials because in the past, as it was their duty, they served under Democrat Presidents and Democrat Secretaries of State." To strengthen his argument he pointed out that State Department career officers are "like career soldiers" and that "just as the Nation depends, for defense purposes, on the graduates of our Military and Naval Academies, so the Nation, for foreign services, depends on our career diplomats."

How empty would be that comparison if politicians are permitted to stigmatize those very leaders who are held up as the criteria of career services!

Dependent Care. Secretary of Defense Wilson has taken a forward step by appointing the new Citizens Advisory Commission on Medical Care of Dependents of Military Personnel. Dependent care has suffered in the past, and is under ever present threats, both from outside sources as well as from uninformed internal efforts at economy.

To get the full facts, the Commission should seek views from many different sources. It should listen to the ranking officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps who can tell them how the assurance of medical care of dependents removes one of the principal sources of worry from the minds of officers and enlisted men in their commands and makes them more efficient and, conversely, how uncertainty on that score lowers morale, lessens attention to duty, and makes them want to get out of the Service. They should hear also from the Surgeons General of the Services, who will tell them that the absence of dependent care makes it increasingly difficult to attract high type professional men who do not want to confine their experience to young men. They should hear also from welfare workers who can tell them of the suffering, want, and lack of attention borne by the loved ones of low paid personnel when illness strikes at times when the heads of their families are away in service and government care is not available. And, most certainly, they should hear the men and their families tell what it means to them.

With the full facts in view, it is most likely that such a commission would recommend a full program of assured dependent care.

Grooming Project Voluntary

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Some of the ladies you reported (11 April JOURNAL) as "incensed" by the Department of Defense announcement that it would co-sponsor with the Toilet Goods' Association a personal grooming project for women in the military services might greet with more nearly unanimous enthusiasm the word that from the very conception of the idea for this program, it was agreed that participation in it should be on a voluntary basis.

Those ladies who "insist on the right to disagree" with the idea of this non-commercial project and maintain that it "is apt to give an unfavorable impression" should remember that all of the Services have long devoted a portion of the basic training hours to the subject of personal grooming.

Because there are numerous women in the Services who have voluntarily asked for personal grooming advice, a plan for a project was worked out whereby the Toilet Goods' Association, strictly as a public service, would cooperate with the Department of Defense in providing personal grooming instructions to meet existing needs of women in military uniforms.

Details of the program are being developed cooperatively by representatives of the Directors of the women's components and civilian experts in the cosmetics industry. The program's budget, voluntarily contributed by the industry at no cost to the Government, is to provide for publication of a pamphlet dealing with all phases of good grooming; three ten-minute motion pictures demonstrating the principles of grooming; and the services of a highly qualified lecturer who will be available to basic training classes and other groups of Service women at military installations who wish to volunteer for instruction.

There is far more to this program than "how to use a comb and brush and put on lipstick."

Those familiar with the details of this jointly sponsored project think that it is a far-sighted public service on the part of the cosmetic industry which fills a legitimate need expressed by Service women themselves.

An Officer—And a Gentleman?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Hand in hand with the loss of privilege (PX systems, higher commissary overhead, constant attack on medical service for dependents, constantly changing personnel policies, etc.) which is lowering morale in the Army, the Army itself has, in the case of its officers, further pushed morale down by doubting the integrity of its officers by evidencing concretely a lack of trust in its officers. As an example of this doubting an officer's integrity through lack of trust, I would like to present the following small,

though not isolated, example:

On 9 April 1953 while on leave in Washington, I went to Fort McNair to make some purchases in the QM Sales Store. Being short of cash, I went to the Fort McNair Post Exchange to cash a check. At the cashier's cage I asked for a counter check or a check on the Army National Bank. I was informed by the civilian cashier (one of our too numerous PX employees) that she had no counter checks and, even if she did, she couldn't cash a counter check for me. This information, a violation of the PX charter which provides for the cashing of personal checks, was given me in rather a haughty manner as though I were some type of lower class citizen.

Failing to have a check cashed at the PX I next went to the Fort McNair Officers' Club where I was given some counter checks but informed that, since I was not a Club Member, a check of mine could not be cashed. (I would have had no trouble in a Navy Officers' Club, of course, for the Navy, in spite of the Congress still presumes that the title "Officer" includes "gentleman.") Realizing that the Army, in which I have been a commissioned officer since 1936, did not, after all these years, trust me, I finally drove to Harry's Liquor Store where my check was cashed without question. And so, back to Fort McNair once more, cash in hand, where I was finally able to make purchases in the QM Sales Store.

COLONEL, INFANTRY
AGAIN

Corps at a time when it was under free-wheeling attack. Concluding his remarks before the Senate Armed Services Ammunition Subcommittee on 20 April, General Collins said: "Before closing I would like to say for the record that I feel the Army Ordnance Corps has done a highly creditable job under extremely difficult circumstances. It has furnished and is continuing to furnish munitions and equipment of all types for our own forces, our sister services, and our United Nations partners on a battlefield 5,000 miles from our West Coast.

"When all the facts are considered, I think we have reason to be proud of the performance of Army Ordnance and of American industry, for 95 per cent of all our Ordnance procurement is by private contract. It is this Army Ordnance-industry team, with essentially the same organization which did such a splendid job during World War II, that is continuing to do likewise today."

General Collins' statement emphasized to all members of the Ordnance Corps and to all other personnel of the Army that loyalty goes both ways—down as well as up.

10 Years Ago—

More than 2,500 fighting planes have been transported to the world's warfronts by aircraft carriers of the U. S. Navy, including the U.S.S. Hornet, identified as the vessel which launched the Tokyo Raiders. Of these planes, over 1,000 were land plane fighters, which were lashed to the flight and hangar decks of American carriers.

50 Years Ago—

The Secretary of War has decided to waive, for the present, the requirement of the past that officers of the Signal Corps of the Army who come up for promotion shall be proficient in at least one foreign language.

85 Years Ago—

The United States will be largely governed, during the present generation at least, by men of military experience. With four million men on one side or the other in the field during the war, it would not be strange if they formed as large a proportion of governors as of governed. The soldier's training is now, as it has been in all ages, a help to his civic career.

Universal Military Training Talk Renewed

In and Out of Government, Thought Is Being Given to Possibility of Meshing U.M.T. Into Selective Service and Eventually Eliminating the Draft

PENTAGON manpower officials, as well as prominent civilian spokesmen, are giving renewed consideration to the long-discussed problem of Universal Military Training amid indications that the Eisenhower Administration must soon tip its hand on its attitude towards U.M.T.

Although a relatively infinitesimal fiscal item in the budget, the National Security Training Commission is a key to the ultimate prospects for U.M.T. Former President Truman asked $55,000 for the NSTC for fiscal '54, compared with $37,500 voted for fiscal '53 and $149,754 approved in fiscal '52. It is recalled that strenuous efforts were made by U.M.T. foes to eliminate the NSTC entirely by denying it any funds last year. It is likely that this attempt will be made with vigor during upcoming budget action on Capitol Hill.

If the Eisenhower Administration does not oppose attempts to eliminate the NSTC, it could very well mean abandonment of U.M.T.; if, however, a fight is made for continuation of the Commission this action would indicate White House favor for an eventual U.M.T. program.

There are numerous reasons why the U.M.T. discussion is being revived at this time. Here are some of them:

Draft Call Cuts—When Selective Service calls were high—in the range from 50,000 to 80,000 per month—the contention was strong that U.M.T. would not be practicable as a simultaneous operation with the draft. But the Army in the next year will not be taking more than 32,000 men a month—perhaps considerably less if manpower strength is reduced.

Young Men Called—The drain on the available manpower pool, under present deferment policies, is resulting in the contemporary induction of many teenagers, who must serve two years. As younger men are taken into service, pressure for shorter active duty service will grow.

Reserve Strength Grows—With hundreds of thousands of combat veterans now in the Reserve, some Pentagon officials think that the time has come to begin considering reducing the standing forces and to initiate the building up of a Reserve which is not made up completely of veterans of WWII or Korea service. This, of course, is also tied in with the economy drive.

The Long-Haul Problem—Whereas the defense buildup program laid down by then Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall during the last half of 1950 has seen the industrial mobilization base expanded, it has not seen the start of U.M.T., which General Marshall insisted was co-essential for a long-range program. With the recent emphasis on a long-range defense approach, rather than on a buildup to meet the danger of a particular year, it can be expected that U.M.T. will be studied as an alternative to the draft.

The chances are that Selective Service would not be replaced suddenly by U.M.T. Rather there is more likelihood the two would function side by side for a considerable period. During this time, Selective Service calls likely would be carefully reduced as U.M.T. was stepped up on a gradual basis.

The reason that the relationship of Selective Service and U.M.T. currently is being studied energetically is that military personnel planning must be projected months into the future. This planning must be adjusted to fiscal factors. Specifically, any U.M.T. program must be geared to an annual budget.

Obviously, except for the NSTC request (unless eliminated), U.M.T. will not be represented in the fiscal '54 military budget. But while President Eisenhower has not yet indicated to Congress his revisions in this budget, work already is in progress for the fiscal '55 budget.

That is why there is going to be important interest in the fate of the National Security Training Commission in the fiscal '54 funds bill.

This week, there was evidence that the American Legion, a leading force for U.M.T., is planning to resume its campaign. National Commander Lewis K. Gough declared that the present draft system is "morally wrong" because it selects "one youngster out of five and obligates him to a total of eight years' active and reserve service and requires no service at all from the other four."

Commander Gough told the annual legislative dinner of the Legion in Washington, D. C., that a U.M.T. program should be enacted.

In addition to the Legion, another group outside the Pentagon and Congress which likely will be speaking out anew on U.M.T. is the National Guard Association. The Association feels that the draft and recruiting programs of the Services are jeopardizing Guard strength. Many Guard leaders are known to favor a plan whereby a young man could enter the Guard and fulfill his military obligation in that organization, either instead of or after the six months' active service proposed under the U.M.T. program. This would have considerable political appeal.

As for the President's attitude, it was expressed most recently in his campaign address at Baltimore, Md., on 25 Sept. when he declared:

"It seems clear that so long as we are forced to employ the draft, because of actual combat requirements, we cannot at the same time establish any form of training for our young men. To attempt this would create more difficulty and injustice than now exists."

It is to be noted that the President said that U.M.T. could not be started so long as the draft is employed "because of actual combat requirements." This attitude could change if fighting stopped in Korea.

Then, perhaps the President might return to a viewpoint he held in 1948, when as retiring Army Chief of Staff, he said:

"Universal Military Training is an essential measure under present circumstances. But because it is only one of many elements in our security planning, it cannot be considered a panacea for all security deficits."

"Nor can it be adopted as a temporary arrangement to be erased from the statutes each time problems in its administration arise. It must be a vigorously prosecuted activity in our preparatory processes until we can be assured that danger of global war belongs only to history."

"This vital issue," said Chief of Staff Eisenhower, "should be settled without further delay. Unless the proposed plan is adopted in the near future, we must recast our traditional attitude toward a small professional security establishment and embark upon a total reorganization of the Army's civilian components."

"Realism" Again Lowers NATO Aims

WHEN the NATO Council assembled in Paris on Thursday, it was to consider an annual review, prepared by the Military Committee under some rather obvious guidance, which aimed at greater "realism." Realism has come to connote bad news for military planners, and this is no exception, for the military target for western Europe by the end of 1953 is appreciably shrunk from last year's expectations. The western nations (exclusive of Greece and Turkey, that is) now aim at a land force of 60 divisions, largely reserve but (it is hoped) reserve divisions at a higher state of combat readiness than in the past. West Germany's arming could make a mighty difference, but that cannot be counted upon until the still doubtful treaties are signed. The airplane target is 5,000 planes, on the way toward a 5,600 total in 1954.

Both estimates, it must be recognized, are at present in fact more realistic than the former hoped-for targets. It is little more than a year since an optimistic SHAPE was talking in terms of 72 divisions by the end of 1953, and 96 in the course of 1955. Those totals are not in prospect, and the concept of 1954 or 1955 as a critical time also seems to be shelved. For this last change in thinking, Russian peace propaganda is in some measure responsible, but a still larger factor is the reluctance of western nations to take on the economic burden that rapid preparation would undoubtedly place upon them.

"WHAT ABOUT THE LOOT?"

per cent to be distributed among the remaining allies, which there seems to be a good chance of their taking on.

As to fighter-planes, one gathers from unofficial statements that the western powers are agreed upon a program of 1,200 jet fighters under NATO command—by 1956. Again this is a stretchout in time, but it is a target likelier of attainment than was our 1954 target, and realism is certainly necessary in our planning. One gathers that some 300 of the planes will be Hawker-Hunters, 250 Mysteres, and 50 or more the British Gloster all-weather type which is currently greatly needed.

AT THIS WRITING, only unofficial reports of the Council meeting are available. But they seem clearly to indicate that responsible representatives from all the western powers remain unperturbed by Moscow's cooing noises, and perfectly aware that the simulated peace offensive is aimed at lessening the determination of the western alliance. Secretary Dulles en route to Paris called impressively for "growing strength of the free world." Delays in reaching NATO's targets are regrettable, but they do not appear to have been accompanied by any weakening of the alliance's integrity.

AMERICAN INTEREST has been fixed this past week on the Orient, and particularly on the truce zone where our sick and wounded have been coming back from Red captivity, in exchange for the much larger torrent of Reds northward bound. Satisfaction in getting this number back does not blind anyone to the fact that a great many American wounded whose lives might have been prolonged are not living, so crude have been some of the enemy's surgical treatments and so harsh the Reds' early treatment of all prisoners. The returning men's stories of brutality and plain murder, and their declarations that not all our wounded are being delivered today, both call for searching inquiry into the facts. There is great satisfaction that the Reds' savage "brain-washing" techniques were not employed on the first prisoners restored to us; certainly none of them wished anything so much as a quick return to family life in America; they were more amused than hurt by clumsy propaganda to which they had been exposed. It remains to be seen what severe and effective maltreatment, for propaganda purposes, has been given their comrades who are still held in North Korea's prison camps.

OUR FAR EAST POLICIES in general were clarified last week-end by Secretary of State Dulles, shortly after the President's remarks summarized in these columns a week ago. Mr. Dulles on this occasion emphasized our expectation of a "free and united Korea" (killing off the disturbing rumor that we have been considering a continuation of the dividing line); on a speeding of military assistance to Formosa, plus the continued protection of Formosa by the U. S. Seventh Fleet (killing off a good many other rumors); and on the solidarity of United Nations thinking about freedom throughout Southeast Asia, rather than in Korea and Formosa alone.

INDO-CHINA'S SITUATION justifies this last expression. For the Communist Vietminh invasion of Laos (south and southwest of the long continued activities in Vietnam) has taken on larger proportions, with a three-pronged attack and with Vietminh forces assaulting as well deployed battalions rather than by individual stealth, and at points far removed from where the French-Union command had thought the rebels to be. It is presumably the start of a spring campaign on a

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Defense Comptroller Warns Against Cut-Back—In the midst of widely circulated reports that the Defense Department is considering broad and sudden changes in the industrial mobilization program laid down by former Secretaries George C. Marshall and Robert A. Lovett, an important address by an official who has served as Assistant Secretary of Defense since creation of the Defense Department was delivered on 17 April.

Assistant Secretary W. J. McNeil—the man who has had more intimate contact with U. S. military budgets than any other Government official—told the National Defense Luncheon of the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting:

"Every effort will be made to make the defense program efficient and economical, but it can never be cheap. However, the most expensive step we could ever take would be to repeat the error of World War II and permit ourselves to be panicked into a precipitous cut-back which could invite a World War III."

Mr. McNeil gave an authoritative review of the broad mobilization base philosophy of General Marshall and Mr. Lovett (significantly he quoted General Marshall at the outset of his address and Mr. Lovett at the conclusion) and stressed that it was aimed neither at a wide open or tight-shut throttle.

"What we need is, clearly, a cruising speed, and that is what our military program has been aimed at for the last two years."

Assistant Secretary McNeil, who served as a Navy rear admiral during WWII, said that a review of Defense Department financing requirements, under way for three months, will be finished early in May. He said "a complete exploration is being made of every means of insuring more efficient and effective use of funds and assets of the Department of Defense. We are determined to develop and maintain powerful U. S. forces."

"However," continued Admiral McNeil, "there is every intention of eliminating frills, fads and foolishness, some of which inevitably creep into any large program. Every item in the program that calls for the spending of dollars is being examined with a view to eliminating those of doubtful or limited value."

But while stressing the intensive review of defense spending, Mr. McNeil, who began his address by stating that the Nation must be protected not only "from visible aggression by a powerful military force but also from the more sinister forms of invisible aggression that weaken the will to protect ourselves," concluded by warning that "until there is a fundamental change in the long-term Soviet policy, the United States must maintain powerful military forces. We must be careful," he said, "not to be misled by tactical maneuvers."

Critical Period For Navy—The Navy League said this week that the next few months "will be a critical period for the Navy" because the decisions soon to be taken by the SecDef, the President and the 83d Congress "will vitally affect the Navy for years to come."

The League told its members that the Air Force is understood to be making a "determined effort" to bring about the appointment of an Air Force general as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

At the same time, the League said the recent recommendations by General Vandenberg and ex-Secretary Finletter that the roles and missions of the three services be redefined "probably are intended to enhance the role of the Air Force at the expense of Navy Aviation."

Honor General Snow—The giant new academic building under construction for the Artillery School at Ft. Sill, Okla., has been named Snow Hall in honor of the late Maj. Gen. William J. Snow, the first chief of field artillery.

General Snow was graduated from West Point in 1890 and in 1908 became the first field artilleryman to graduate from the Army War College. He organized the Field Artillery Association in 1910 and founded the Field Artillery Journal.

He served as commandant of the School of Fire before he was named Chief of Field Artillery in 1918, serving in that capacity until he retired in 1927. The new building will be the second to bear the name of Snow Hall. The first, a large frame building housing offices and classrooms was destroyed by fire in 1929.

Supreme Court Justices On Military Pay—Two members of the U. S. Supreme Court, although dissenting to a decision aimed at protecting military personnel, have given judicial recognition to the low pay of service personnel.

The case involved an Air Force officer, Claiborne Dameron, who maintained that because he is a citizen and resident of Louisiana, he should not be required to pay a tax of $23.51 on his personal property, valued at $460, to the city and county of Denver, Colo., where he resided while stationed at Lowry AFB, Colo.

The Court reversed the decision of the Supreme Court of Colorado which had said the tax—paid under protest—was legal. The U. S. Supreme Court said that Congress "thought that compulsory presence in a state should not alter the benefits and burden of our system of dual federalism during service with the Armed Forces."

In dissenting, Justices Douglas and Black contended that Colorado had the right to impose the tax, saying that if the service man gets immunity "it means that other citizens must pay his share" for such protection and benefits as police, courts, parks, sanitary districts, school, etc.

In their dissent, the Justices state: "... we also know that service men and women receive salaries much lower than those earned in civilian life."

The dissenting justices said "the power to tax is basic to the sovereignty of the states. The creation of islands of tax immunity should therefore be sparingly made. The tax immunity here recognized is not contained in the Constitution. It cannot be fairly implied because Denver's tax does not burden the performance of federal function."

With this view, the other justices disagreed. They said in the majority opinion that "the constitutionality of federal legislation exempting servicemen from the substantial burdens of seriate taxation by the states in which they may be required to be present by virtue of their service, cannot be doubted."

But aside from the importance of the legal question involved, it was significant that the dissenting justices took particular note of the relatively low pay of those in service.

MEMO

To Journal Readers

...There's clinical evidence the Defense Dept. announcement creating the DEPENDENT CARE COMMISSION was not timed accidentally. It came simultaneously with Capitol Hill hearings on extension of the Doctor Draft. Civilian medical officials had indicated intentions to raise the dependent care issue during the hearings. This had been protested by Sec'y Wilson's SPECIAL ASSISTANT on health matters, formerly chairman of the Armed Forces Medical Policy Council. He said the doctor draft and dependent care were SEPARATE PROBLEMS; the Moulton Commission announcement apparently was timed to stress that point.

...Army officials are delighted with the REHABILITATION SUCCESS of the first group of AWOL soldiers sent to Korea for whom there are reports. Out of more than 300 men sent from the Sixth Army, MORE THAN HALF proved themselves in combat to earn promotions to NCO rank. Only one was returned to the U.S. as a prisoner. The hope is that later reports will show a continuation of such results—where men given a SECOND CHANCE are coming through.

...The Eisenhower '54 MILITARY BUDGET hasn't reached Capitol Hill yet; nonetheless, work on the '55 (correct, fifty-five) funds request is well under way already. The AF Flight Test Center at Edwards AFB, Calif., for example, just dispatched its proposed '55 budget to ARDC Hdqs. in Baltimore. The BUDGET BOOK for this single activity contains a mere 2500 (correct, twenty-five hundred) pages.

...A revised printing of the Senate Armed Services Committee document on MANPOWER UTILIZATION—the Sarnoff Commission Report—discloses that two members did not sign it. Page 3 of the original printing reports that Clarence Francis and C. R. Smith signed in absentia with Father John J. Cavanaugh, former president of Notre Dame. An ERRATA SHEET and two pages of addenda in the later printing show, however, that Francis and Smith did not sign the report. Another member, Robert W. Johnson, resigned two months before the report was released.

...The Army will experience a striking decline in the number of WWII COMBAT VETERANS receiving commissions through the ROTC program. Last year, out of 14,431 graduating seniors named SECOND LIEUTENANTS, 4809 saw war service; this year's group of about 13,000 will include only about 600 former G.I.'s.

...Air Force officials are concerned that Asst. SecDef. Hannah's appeal for an all-Service HOLLOWAY PLAN will be a deterrent to establishment of an AF ACADEMY. Other educators (Dr. Hannah is president of Michigan State) are certain to endorse extension of the SUBSIDIZED EDUCATION plan and conceivably some may argue that the Air Force then would not need its own Academy.

...Concurrently with REDUCED DRAFT CALLS, the Army is giving renewed attention to a plan for eliminating basic training by the TECHNICAL SERVICES, which now operate 13 replacement centers—two of them at a single post, Camp Gordon, Ga. (Signal and MP). There are strong advocates for a change which would substitute BASIC COMBAT TRAINING for all men entering the Army, with branch specialization later. The powerful FIELD FORCES HDQS. endorses such a modification in the training program.

Navy Alters Destroyers

Four Navy destroyers have entered the Naval Shipyard at Long Beach, Calif., to undergo alterations. They are the USSs De Haven, Mansfield, Lyman K. Swenson and Collett, all members of Destroyer Division 91, recently returned from duty in Korean waters.

The Navy said all of the vessels except the Collett will be equipped with new, 3-inch-50 rapid fire guns. Other major alterations will include relocating some officers' and crews' quarters as well as the ship's service store to accommodate new installations.

New bin stowage systems for machinery, hull and ordnance repair parts will be installed aboard the Collett and De Haven. If they are found successful, the installations "probably will be expanded to cover the entire fleet," a Navy spokesman said.

Work on the four vessels, covering a period of about four weeks, will cost some $6,500,000.

Commanding the ships are: De Haven—Comdr. T. C. Siegmund; Mansfield—Comdr. T. T. McGillicuddy; Lyman K. Swenson—Comdr. W. E. Kuntz; and Collett—Comdr. E. P. Madley.

"Phantom" Concert—

The Woman's Army and Navy League, of which Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower is Honorary President, is launching its major fund-raising benefit for the year: a Phantom Concert (make-believe concert) to take place on or about Defense Day 16 May. The purpose is to raise money for the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, and Airmen's Club in Washington which the League sponsors. Thousands of invitations to subscribe to the concert at the rate of $2.00 a ticket (real money) are being sent all over the world and the League anticipates a big response. The League hopes to make the Phantom Concert an annual affair so that the term

"Phantom Concert" will become associated with the Woman's Army and Navy League as a fund-raising project.

The Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen's Club (the home away from home for servicemen) is operated and maintained by the Woman's Army and Navy League for servicemen from all over the country. It has been located at 1015 L Street, N.W. since 1923. Last year 26,934 men were lodged at the Club and 27,564 meals were served.

The League was first organized in 1872 by a small group of wives of officers of the Armed Forces. Today its membership runs into thousands and is spread out all over the world. Included with the ladies pouring were Mrs. John D. Ryan, Mrs. Abner Zehm, and prominent club members from El Paso.

A large number of civilian Woman's Club members attended from El Paso and Jaurez, Mexico. Representatives from the William Beaumont Officers Wives Club, White Sands Proving Ground Woman's Club, Biggs AFB Woman's Club, and Holloman AFB Woman's Club also attended.

■ HUTCHINSON NAS, KANS. A Thrift Shop under the auspices of the Wives Club opened recently. A Committee under Mrs. Carl Giese and Mrs. T. H. Stearns, the Wives Club representative, collected usable items from Navy families and new things from Hutchinson Merchants for resale at the shop which is staffed by members of the Wives' Club.

The Club entertained recently with a guest luncheon and style show at the Bisonte Hotel. "In Your Easter Bonnet" was the theme for the party and spring bonnets on hat trees were placed around the room and clever paper hats and Easter eggs decorated the tables. Mrs. M. F. Carpenter and her committee were in charge of arrangements for the luncheon and Mrs. Harry Farmer was program chairman. Mrs. H. C. Stirling was emcee for the fashion show and the following Navy Wives were models: Mmes. E. A. Kujawa, H. S. Noon, H. K. Sims, C. W. Keller, R. J. Timm, V. P. Van Kuren, H. M. O'Leary, J. C. Curry, R. N. Shears, J. F. Jenista, T. H. Stearns, H. D. Ruppel, R. W. Marshall, J. C. Riley and N. J. Vagianos.

■ FT. LEAVENWORTH, KANS. Mrs. J. W. Coutts gave a vivacious performance to pace a well-rehearsed cast through "Private Lives," presented 16, 17 and 18 April before record audiences. The Noel Coward comedy closed the '52-'53 little theater season at the Command and General Staff College post. "Goodbye, My Fancy" and "Angel Street" were presented earlier in the season.

The scenario for "Private Lives" centers around the volatile Amanda Fyenne, played by Mrs. Coutts, and her ex-husband, the equally fiery Elyot Chase, played by Lt. Col. Lloyd M. Marr.

Foils for the hilarious antics of this pair are second husbands and wives in the person of Mrs. Thomas F. Ball as Sibyl Chase and Lt. Col. H. V. Middleworth as Victor Fyenne. The French-speaking maid was played by Miss Carolyn Roberson, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. G. L. Roberson.

Directing the cast was Col. John S. Sanderson, assisted by Mrs. G. W. McCaffrey. Colonel Sanderson is a British Army officer assigned to the faculty of the college. Technical director was Lt. Col. P. L. Bogen, with Mrs. J. E. Olson as set designer. Assisting in staging the show were Col. C. V. Ruzek, Lt. Col. George Godding, Lt. Col. Wm. Quirey, Lt. Col. E. Samusson, Lt. Col. F. E. Stevenson, Lt. Col. R. J. Hoffman, Lt. Col. and Mrs. J. D. Iseman, Lt. Col. and Mrs. H. C. Curtis, Mrs. Sam Roberts, Maj. R. B. Kreutzer, Lt. Michael Shatnahan, Mrs. J. A. Isbell, and Capt. Lee Bolling. Ladies with backstage duties also included Mrs. Jean Dunn, Mrs. J. R. Dorman, Mrs. F. R. Sullivan, and Mrs. O. M. Hirsch.

U. S. COAST GUARD

COAST GUARD personnel are hopeful that an opportunity will be afforded for testimony before the Moulton Commission on Dependent Care (page 1 this issue).

As THE JOURNAL has frequently pointed out in the past, Coast Guard dependents, particularly those overseas, are discriminated against in the matter of dependent care, since there is no authority for their treatment in medical installations of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

Coast Guard dependents may be cared for at Public Health Service hospitals, but not all of these provide services for wives and children and thousands of Coast Guard personnel are stationed at distances from such facilities.

of the Navy's precision fighting team. To do this he learns the importance of positions in flight sections, division and squadron tactics. The fledgling grows as he is molded into a member of, and realizes his responsibilities in, the Navy's precision team.

Finally, as a member of the team, he progresses through the "pipe line" to NAAS Barin Field where teamwork is advanced to "fighting teamwork." The student practices the elementary rudiments of air to air combat techniques, learns to use his plane as a weapon by firing on moving and stationary targets. By this time, many of his primary flight techniques have been set into effective habits—the challenge changes from "flying the airplane" to "accomplishing the mission." This is a gradual transition, but when made, the fledgling has made a big step in his growth.

And then the big day arrives—the mission which distinguishes a Naval Aviator from other military pilots—landing aboard an aircraft carrier. After practicing with a Landing Signal Officer on a field which has a painted area simulating a flight deck of a carrier, the student pilot gains new stature with at least eight landings aboard a carrier operating in the Gulf of Mexico. Presently, NavCads are qualifying aboard a CVL, the USS Monterey.

At this stage, the end of Basic Training is almost in sight. Following the six weeks of instrument flight training at NAAS Corry Field, the student then has completed 12 months of training, logged 200 hours of flight time, over a thousand hours of ground school, is well indoctrinated in Navy lore, and emerges from the Basic Training "pipe line." He is transferred to the Naval Air Advanced Training Command, headed by Rear Adm. A. K. Morehouse, at Corpus Christi, Texas. Upon completion of advanced training, the student pilot is designated a Naval Aviator and in the case of NavCads, commissioned either an Ensign in the Naval Reserve or a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve, and is ordered to duty with a fleet squadron.

Naval Air Basic Training is not easy. It takes the best a man can offer to meet the requirements. There are no "forced attritions," but statistics kept over a period of years show that for every 100 students entering the Basic "pipe line" only 76 complete the course. This average 24% attrition rate includes all who fail to complete the program, whether it be ground failure, flight failure, physical failure, violation of contract (a cadet may not marry while in training) or drop from flight training at own request. Most NavCads who fail to complete the course are retained in the Navy as enlisted men until selective service requirements are met. Those few who request and are selected for Officer Candidate School serve on active duty as officers either two or three years after graduation, depending on their age at the time they complete the course.

In more than 25 years of working with the end product of the training command, namely the veteran Naval Aviator, the worth of a firm background of effective and sound flying habits, of teamwork developed to the highest degree, and of perfectly coordinated effectiveness to accomplish the mission of Naval Aviation, has been proven.

Looking to Korea, we see that as far as June 1951, 46% of all sorties against the enemy were flown by Navy or Marine pilots. As of this date, more than 40% of all missions flown in Korea continue to be flown by Navy or Marine pilots.

The fledgling of Naval Air Basic Training Command is the Naval Aviator of tomorrow. He is ready and will be prepared to accomplish his mission in the mighty Naval Air Arm of the fleet.

Col. Saylor Made Div. Chief

Col. Louis F. Saylor, MC, has been appointed Chief of the Education and Training Division, Office of the Army Surgeon General. He will serve pending the arrival of the permanent replacement for Col. Floyd L. Wergeland, MC, former Chief of the Education and Training Division, recently designated as the medical officer to attend the 1953-54 term at the National War College.

landings on board an aircraft carrier in the Gulf of Mexico.

The student pilot spends the first 16 weeks of the "pipe line" at NAS Pensacola in Pre-Flight School absorbing intensive courses in academics, athletics, and Military Drill. His first flight introduction to the SNJ "Texan" trainer is during his next stage, primary flight training at NAAS Whiting Field, 35 miles northeast of Pensacola. He solos after an average of about 25 hours, becomes proficient in acrobatics, precision landings, simulated emergencies, and small field procedures. His execution of flight maneuvers becomes smoother as he gains confidence, and the growing fledgling progresses to tactics, formation flight training and night flying at NAAS Saufley Field. He must become an integral part

MATS Flies Power Plant To Aid Greenland Air Base

When a Military Air Transport Service C124 Douglas Globemaster arrived at a U. S. Air Force Base in Greenland recently it brought along electrical power insurance for the frigid air field.

As the big plane taxied to a stop it ended a hurry-up journey that originated at its home base, McChord Field, Wash. Its main cargo, picked up at Lowry Field in Denver, Colo., was a 13-ton self-contained 300-kilowatt Caterpillar D397 Diesel Electric Set which was badly needed to bolster the base's power system, described at that time as "shaky at its best."

It was the emergency of the power situation at this desolate base that prompted MATS to send one of its largest transports on this special mission almost a third of the way around the world. Three days after the plane left the U. S. it was providing power for the needs of the civilian and military personnel located at the air field.

The wheels were set in motion for the long-range delivery when Maj. Charles McAliley, chief procurement officer for the Northwest Air Command in St. Johns, Newfoundland, notified Jack Hunkele, assistant manager of Caterpillar's governmental sales division in Peoria, Ill., that an electric set was needed quickly. Hunkele made special arrangements to furnish the D397 which was on special display in Denver at that time. MATS then coordinated things by assigning one of its Globemasters to the task.

Dedicate Mo. Engr. Project

The $40 million Chain of Rocks Locks-and-Canal will be dedicated 9 May at Granite City, Mo., during colorful ceremonies which will include a picturesque water parade featuring over 200 water craft of all types.

After formal dedication ceremonies during which the principal address will be delivered by Maj. Gen. Samuel D. Sturgis, Jr., Chief of Army Engineers, whose organization directed the construction of the great river transportation facility, a concert will be held by the Scott AFB, Ill., Band.

The water parade will include 35 to 50 towboats, three Corps of Engineers craft, two Coast Guard river cutters, many Coast Guard Auxiliary craft and between 100 and 200 pleasure craft. Chairman of the Waterway Parade Committee is Capt. C. W. Thomas, USCG.

INDUSTRY * FINANCE

Sees 2,500 MPH in 10 Years

Engineers are predicting that the U. S. aviation industry within 10 years will be producing airplanes that will travel at speeds of 2,500 miles per hour and more. Mundy I. Peale, President of Republic Aviation Corporation and Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Aircraft Industries Association, said 23 April in New York. He also warned that "we must expect that the Russians can build such planes, too."

Peale made a plea for a long-range and more economical air power procurement program before the National Aeronautics dinner of the Society of Automotive Engineers. He was introduced by Admiral Dewitt C. Ramsey (U.S.N., Ret.), President of the Aircraft Industries Association.

"It is estimated that if this country had been operating under a long-range program of airplane procurement," Mr. Peale said, "the buildup since Korea would have cost some two to three billion dollars less than it has to date—and our airplanes would have been further advanced. It is in the area of long-range planning alone that we can hope to make substantial savings in building up an adequate air force—the kind of savings large enough to be felt by the individual taxpayers."

B-47 Test Program

Completion of a 1,000-hour shakedown program in which a single B-47 Stratojet medium bomber flew more than 432,000 miles under simulated combat conditions was announced this week by Boeing Airplane Company with Department of Defense approval.

Simulated bombing missions were carried out over many of the principal cities of the United States. On 12 of the flights actual loads of 1,000-pound dummy bombs were dropped on a coastal bombing range from altitudes of 40,000 feet or more.

Extremely high speeds were accomplished when the airplane "hitched a ride" on jet streams. One of these, found between Albuquerque, N. M., and Wichita, Kans., permitted the Stratojet to maintain a ground speed of 794 miles per hour for 30 minutes.

While flights averaged 8 1/2 hours each, many lasted 12 and 13 hours. The longest kept the 185,000-pound medium bomber in the air 14 hours and 25 minutes. Missions averaged more than 3,000 miles, but single flights well in excess of this were not uncommon with aerial refueling. In all, the B-47 was flown 432,066 statute miles, equal to nearly 17 times around the globe, and crossed 39 of the 48 states.

Col. Tuttle Named Asst.

Col. William B. Tuttle, whose retirement in July will close out a 36-year military career, has been named assistant to the president of Pennsylvania Military College at Chester, Pa., it has been announced by Dr. Edwin A. Howell, acting president.

Colonel Tuttle has been professor of military science and tactics at PMC since January 1949.

Litter Loading the H-25

A technique for loading litter patients in the Piasecki H-25 helicopter has been developed following a series of tests conducted in December, 1952, by representatives of the Army Surgeon General's Office, Surgeon General of the Army Field Forces, and the Navy.

The method eventually adopted makes it possible for a trained crew of four men, two inside the H-25 and two men to carry the litter to the ship, to place three litters inside the helicopter in 1:57. It took approximately 2 1/4 minutes with an untrained crew.

The technique works this way: Two bearers bring the litter to the cabin door. Inside, two men grasp the forward handles of the litter and place the outboard handle into a specially designed slot in the far side of the fuselage. The handle moves forward quickly through the slot, making it unnecessary to tilt the litter. It simultaneously speeds up the loading operation. The top litter is placed first, followed by the bottom litter.

While the forward part of the litter is moving through the slot, the aft crew member places the outboard aft litter handle on a shelf-like rack and pushes the litter into place. Four bolts make bracket interchangeable for troop seats. With three of the handles supported by wall brackets, the fourth-forward inboard handle is slipped into a web strap and is clinched with a quick-fastening buckle.

BLANKET ORDER

Instructions to restrict purchase of blankets to 11 different types for all purposes instead of the 22 which have been stocked and issued in the past, have been issued to the Army, Navy, and Air Force.

The simplified list was compiled through the joint efforts of standardization personnel of the Military Departments and the Office of Standardization, DSMA. The memorandum is an interim action to prevent procurement of non-standard items pending publication of the single catalog section containing procurable clothing and individual equipment items.

Navy Cancels Jaguars

The Navy has announced that it is cancelling contracts for 100 F10F Grumman Jaguar jet fighters because of design and configuration changes which "would result in an unacceptable delay in production of a model meeting Navy requirements."

Twelve Jaguars now on order "will be completed," the Navy said. The experimental model of the plane has been undergoing flight tests at Edwards Air Force Base in California during the past year, and the 12 planes to be completed will be used in further evaluation of the variable sweep wing principle and in other experimental work.

Two Atom Subs Highlight General Dynamics Report

The General Dynamics Corporation, formerly the Electric Boat Company, which laid the keel of the world's first nuclear powered submarine, "Nautilus," reported this week that it earned during 1952 $134,551,610, more than 50 per cent of its sales total during the previous year. Its net earnings were $4,917,176, as compared with $3,872,203 during 1951.

In its annual report to stockholders, John Jay Hopkins, chairman and president of the corporation, said that aside from General Dynamics' success, financially, a deeper satisfaction was to be "derived from the fact that on 14 June 1952, the Corporation's Electric Boat Division laid the keel of the . . . 'Nautilus' at its Groton, Conn., shipyard; and that later in the year Electric Boat was assigned the additional task of designing and building the 'Sea Wolf,' the U. S. Navy's second nuclear-powered submarine. The presence of the President of the United States at the laying of the keel of the 'Nautilus' was a tribute to the importance of the occasion in history."

"While history was being made at Groton, another kind of history, equally significant in these critical times, was being made by Canadair Limited, the corporation's aircraft manufacturing subsidiary in Canada. During 1952 Canadair's accelerated production of F-86E 'Sabre' jet aircraft contributed substantially to the growing power of the three major air forces of the democratic world. Thus today, the Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons defending the critical northern approaches to the North American continent and the RCAF fighter wings serving Europe as part of Canada's contribution to the NATO forces are equipped with 'Sabre' jets produced by Canadair, while other Canadair-built 'Sabres' are being flown by the Royal Air Force in Great Britain and by the United States Air Force in Korea."

The report also listed the following events as important during the 1952 productive year:

- (1) "Delivered three Tang class submarines to the United States Navy."
- (2) "Converted one fleet type submarine to the modern high-speed snorkel type under the Navy's 'Guppy' conversion program."
- (3) "Provided several hundred motors comprising the great majority of auxiliary power installations on the superliner 'United States.'"
- (4) "Completed its 453rd F-86E 'Sabre' jet fighter plane for the Canadian Government."
- (5) "Received an order for 300-500 'Sabre' jet fighters for the British Royal Air Force."
- (6) "Completed the first of more than 500 T-33 'Silver Star' two-seater jet training planes for the RCAF."
- (7) "Prepared for production of T-36 advanced trainer transports, with piston engines, for the United States Air Force."

Billion Dollar Manpower Slash Predicted

which placed actual military strength at about 3.5 million.

The fiscal '53 budget allocates $10.7 billion for military personnel costs, or 23 per cent of the total defense budget authorization of $46.9 billion.

Former President Truman in January sent to Congress a request for $41.2 billion for military personnel costs, or 28 per cent, was asked for military personnel costs in fiscal '54.

Hearings on this budget request were begun by the House Appropriations Committee, but were suddenly suspended last month pending a review by the Eisenhower Administration. This review has reached a point where the following forecasts can be made.

Seek 10% Cut

The Pentagon and Bureau of the Budget, unless reversed at the last moment by President Eisenhower, will seek an approximate 10 per cent cut in military manpower funds. In this regard, the hastily submitted Sarnoff Commission report which said a 10 per cent cut in military manpower and money could be achieved without reducing military effectiveness already has been cited by Appropriations Committee members in Congress as a guideline.

The reduction in military strength will hit the Army and Air Force hardest.

Defense Department officials and the Bureau of the Budget are examining the possibility of cutting the Truman-proposed Army strength by at least 125,000 and the Air Force by approximately 50,000. The Navy and Marine Corps may lose up to 75,000 men.

One rule of thumb budgetary calculation places the cost of a man in uniform at an average of about $5,000 per year.

Estimate Savings

Thus, if military strength were reduced by 250,000 men and women, the saving would be in the neighborhood of $1,250,000,000.

It is important to note that the Army and Air Force will not end the current fiscal year on 30 June with the strength that Congress voted for them.

It was officially estimated by Defense Department fiscal experts in January 1953 that the Army, which began fiscal '53 with a force of 1,594,532 on 30 June 1952, would have 1,544,000 on 30 June 1953. On the basis of a reduction of 21,000 in the draft call for June (down from 53,000 expected originally, to 32,000), it can be stated that the strength of the Army at the end of the fiscal year will be at least 20,000 less than forecast—about the strength of a division.

The Air Force entered fiscal '53 with a strength of 973,474, and was estimated to end the fiscal year on 30 June with a force of 1,016,800. The current strength of the Air Force is placed at about 970,000 and will probably remain relatively constant through the end of the fiscal year.

The Truman defense budget provides funds for a fiscal '54 Army of 1,538,000 and an Air Force of 1,061,000.

A good guess is that, as sent to the Congress in its revised form, the budget will ask 1,400,000 or less for the Army instead of 1,538,000 and about 1,016,800 for the Air Force instead of 1,061,000.

Strengths Down

The Air Force increase in fiscal '54 was scheduled in conjunction with the steady buildup to a force of 143 wings. The Air Force has emphasized that its buildup program was to be achieved with only a 13 per cent increase in manpower compared with a 50 per cent increase in combat strength and officials have indicated that about 1,200,000 personnel would be required for "austerity" manning of a 143-wing organization.

AF Boost Out

It now appears that the 13 per cent increase will not be allowed. Alternatively there is the implication that a further stretch-out is to be initiated and hence with slower delivery of aircraft a reduction in personnel would be possible.

The Navy began fiscal '53 with 817,091. Its estimated fiscal year-end strength and the strength asked in the Truman budget are the same—800,000.

The Marine Corps began fiscal year '53 with 231,956. Strength on 30 June 1953 has been estimated at 246,354 and the estimate for fiscal '54 is 248,612. A 25,000 cut in the Marine Corps would be about the number of men that would be required through the draft in fiscal '54.

Of the $11.7 billion item for military personnel costs in the Truman defense budget, the breakdown by individual Service is as follows: Army, $4.7; Navy and Marine Corps, $3.4; and Air Force, $3.5.

The overall 28 per cent ratio for military personnel costs is represented in the Services by Army, 39 per cent; Navy, 30 per cent; and Air Force, 21 per cent.

sonnel than they require and only if restricted by law will an economical and yet adequate ratio be maintained."

Complaints Against PX's

Complaints against Army and Air Force Exchange activities lodged with the House Armed Services Committee by the American Retail Federation will be taken up directly with the Defense Department rather than through further hearings and possible additional legislative restrictions, Representative William E. Hess (R-Ohio), chairman of the subcommittee in charge, told THE JOURNAL yesterday.

The retail merchants group filed a complaint, based on a survey made by the Gerson-Chastka Associates, alleging that 14 exchanges in Illinois, Ohio, Virginia and Washington, D. C., were found to be violating regulations put into effect as a result of the attacks made against the exchanges by similar groups in 1949.

Congressman Hess said that he will discuss the matter with departmental officials next week.

Dependent Care

representatives of the medical profession or representatives of the Armed Forces.

There is no secret to the fact the American Medical Association wants dependent care for military families curtailed or eliminated. On the other hand, military leaders regard dependent care as a primary morale booster and repeatedly have pointed to reduced medical care benefits as one of the prime reasons why the Armed Services are losing attractiveness as a career to young officers and non-commissioned officers.

Here Are Details For POW And MIA Promotions

The Defense Department has directed the Military Departments to implement "to the maximum extent possible," consistent with law, a joint policy which provides that prisoners of war and persons in a missing status will be given comparable consideration with their contemporaries in the matter of selection and promotion.

To effect this policy, each of the Services should provide for the following with respect to such personnel, the Pentagon said:

"A. Commissioned officers serving in the grade below O-8 and warrant officers will be considered for permanent or temporary promotions in a manner applicable to their contemporaries, unless otherwise prescribed by law. Their absence status shall not alone deprive them of opportunity for promotion above the grade in which last serving.

"B. Officers hereafter selected but not yet promoted prior to entering an absence status and officers hereafter selected while in an absence status will be promoted at the time that such promotion would occur if they were present for duty. Those commissioned officers whose first normal opportunity for promotion has already passed, and who were selected or were otherwise eligible and not promoted solely for reasons of their absence status, will be promoted as if they were present for duty. This policy also applies to advancement in pay grade of warrant officers.

"C. Enlisted personnel will be considered for promotion when they meet the time in grade and/or time in service requirement for the next higher grade, rank or rating and will be promoted, if selected, at the time that such promotion would occur if they were present for duty. Their absence status shall not alone deprive them of opportunity for promotion to the grade above the grade, rank or rating in which last serving, or to a higher grade in cases where qualifications for that higher grade were met prior to attaining an absence status. All time served while in a missing status shall be counted for the purpose of computing time in grade and/or time in service requirement. After enlisted personnel return to military control, in order to advance them to the grade, rank, or rating and precedent which they presumably would have acquired, subsequent promotions will be considered as soon as they are found to be individually qualified.

"D. Persons promoted or advanced under this policy will be entitled to the pay and allowances of the pay grade to which promoted or advanced from the date otherwise prescribed by law.

"E. The next of kin designated by the member will be notified of a promotion or advancement made under this policy. The International Red Cross will likewise be advised of such action, with the request that, if possible, the recipient be informed.

"F. If it is subsequently established by reliable evidence that the member was dead prior to the effective date of the promotion or advancement, the promotion or advancement order will not be revoked."

Legislation will be required in order for implementing paragraph "F" of this policy, the Defense Department said. Such a measure is now being considered on Capitol Hill.

larger scale, and the rebels' confidence in pushing ahead so far from base provides its own warning of more action in Indo-China than had been anticipated.

LATVIA'S HOME-GROWN CABINET

this week went the way of other Communist local "independent" governments, when six Latvians were bounced out and replaced by Russians, at the same time that the little nation's security functions, hitherto distributed among several departments, were concentrated under one official who, needless to say, is a Russian. Kovalchuk, and who reports direct, not to the Latvian government, but to the Ministry of Internal Affairs in Moscow, headed by First Deputy Premier Lavrenti Beria, the No. 2 man (or some say the real No. 1 man) in Soviet Russia. Thus Latvia, which had a few brief years of freedom after World War I only to be reabsorbed and thoroughly purged by Russia, has followed the trail lately blazed by the Ukraine, Byelorussia, Azerbaijan, Tadzhikistan, Georgia, and Karelo-Finland. Even its imitation self-government is gone.

the investigation will not be resumed until about 1 June.

Army Yet To Appear

The Navy and Marine Corps have made their detailed presentations to the subcommittee. The Air Force has presented some material, but is slated for further testimony. The Army has not yet appeared before the subcommittee.

When the subcommittee completes its hearings, there is a good chance that remedial legislation will be proposed. This must, of course, receive approval of the full Armed Services Committee, headed by Representative Dewey Short (R-Mo.), before such a measure could be brought to a vote in the House.

Since Congress is shooting for an early July adjournment, the chances now seem slim that a new officer promotion bill will be enacted during the first session of the 83d Congress.

Alternatives Cited

This could lead to two alternatives. 1. Congress could rely on the promotion controls in the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, fortified by the dollars and cents limitations in the fiscal '54 budget.

2. An appropriations rider such as the Davis Amendment could be voted again.

The creation of the special subcommittee to inquire into the temporary promotion aspects of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947—actually the inquiry frequently has gone beyond this area during the executive session hearings—came as a result of the necessity to revoke the Davis Amendment.

It is recalled that the Defense Department asked Congress to give "priority" attention to the repeal of the Davis Amendment, which would have resulted in some 5,400 demotions of Navy officers and which would have severely hampered promotions in all of the Services.

The Armed Services Committee, in considering this Pentagon request, decided to substitute for the Davis Amendment which placed percentage ceilings on the number of officers in the various grades a bill written by Chairman Short which utilized numerical ceilings.

Ceilings The Same

The ceilings above the ranks of captain in the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps and lieutenant senior grade in the Navy were virtually the same, however, as those in the Davis Amendment.

There are no ceilings for officers in the lower three grades in the Short Bill, which was enacted before a 1 April deadline—the date the Davis Amendment would have gone into effect.

The Short Bill is also short-lived, since it remains in effect only until 1 July. When this measure was acted upon by the House Armed Services Committee, Chairman Short expressed the belief that the Arends Subcommittee inquiry might be completed in time for more comprehensive action during the current session.

This now seems highly unlikely, although certainly not impossible.

Rider Use Possible

It remains to be seen whether the Appropriations Committee will step into the picture and attempt to put additional controls on officer promotions, namely, by the use of an appropriations bill rider.

The House Armed Services Committee and its counterpart in the Senate have given strong notice that their members will oppose strongly new attempts to infringe on what are considered to be the Armed Services Committees' responsibilities.

The belief is that with an officer promotion inquiry under way, even if action cannot be completed until next year, the Appropriations Committees will be more hesitant this year than last to attempt hasty legislative restrictions on officer promotions by use of the rider technique.

Ask Contract Medical Care For Dependents

Medical veterans organizations this week asked the Congress to restrict the ratio of military doctors to a maximum of three for each thousand men in uniform, and to utilize contract hospitals and physicians for dependent care.

The recommendations were made to the House Armed Services Committee as it opened hearings on the proposal to extend the "Physician-Dentist Draft Act." Leaders of the various medical veterans groups were the principal witnesses during the opening session.

Although most of the medical men agreed that there is definite need for an extension of the law, they were at odds about the length of the extension. Some asked that the law not be extended for more than a year, while others said two years should be the maximum.

Representatives of the National Medical Veterans Society recommended the new doctor-troop ratio and use of contract hospitals and physicians.

One witness said the Society feels "it is morally wrong to draft civilian physicians with the avowed purpose of caring for uniformed personnel and then to require their principal duties in the care of civilian dependents." He said, "We encourage the use of contract hospitals and physicians as a beginning of the solution of the dependent care problem."

Another representative asked that the law be made to specify "a maximum ratio of three physicians per thousand uniformed men," the ratio "to be increased or decreased on recommendation by the President." The Society charged that the Services "commonly request more per-
